New Upside Momentum Entering the Bullish Month of December

Executive Summary: Global stock markets' short-term momentum turned bullish again last week following typical short-term price pullbacks lasting about 2--4 weeks. There is a strong bullish seasonal bias in the month of December.

US Equities are demonstrating fresh demand as major indexes and ETFs rise above key Simple Moving Averages (SMAs). Investor sentiment is rebounding from deeply oversold levels indicating Extreme Fear, which is bullish, according to The Art of Contrary Opinion.

International Equities: EFA and EEM are in bullish medium-term trends again as they rise above their 50-day SMAs. China stocks ETF (FXI) is lagging as it remains indecisive below its declining 50-day SMA.

Alternative Assets: medium-term trends appear mixed. Gold, Gold Miners, Silver, and Copper remain bullish. US bonds and notes remain bullish. Bitcoin remains indecisive. US dollar ($USD) medium-term trend remains indecisive and the short-term momentum turned bearish again as price broke down below both the 20-day SMA and 200-day SMA. Crude Oil remains bearish.

Highlights from last week's market action:

- A large majority of our 38 major market ETFs are in objectively strong positions, with the 50-day Simple Moving Average (SMA) above the 200-day SMA for 34 of the 38 ETFs.
- The 4 ETFs that are in weak positions, with the 50-day SMA below the 200-day SMA, are Consumer Staples, Real Estate, Agriculture, and Crude Oil.
- Many short-term momentum ratings improved to bullish from indecisive over the past week. Previously, we emphasized that short-term momentum changes frequently and is of little concern for investors.
- Dow Theory trend is even more bullish as the previously-lagging Transportation Average broke out to its highest price level in 9 months since February 2025.
- Seasonal tendencies for December are bullish.
- Investor sentiment is rebounding from deeply oversold levels indicating Extreme Fear, which is bullish, according to The Art of Contrary Opinion.
- S&P 500 stock price index ($SPX) trend turned bullish, and shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- The Equal-Weight ETF of the S&P 500 (RSP) trend turned bullish.
- The majority of S&P 500 stocks rose back above their own 50-day SMAs.
- The Percentage of S&P 500 stocks above their own 200-day SMAs trend turned bullish, and shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- Number of Net New Highs ($NYHL) trend turned bullish, and shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- Cumulative Advance-Dcline Issues Line ($NYAD) turned strong again, and the medium-term trend and shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- NASDAQ 100 ETF (QQQ) trend turned bullish, and the shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- Small-capitalization stock index ETF (IWM) trend turned bullish, and shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- Developed foreign stock market index ETF (EFA) trend remains bullish, and shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- Emerging stock market index ETF (EEM) trend remains bullish, but shorter-term momentum remained indecisive.
- China stock market index ETF (FXI) trend remains indecisive, and shorter-term momentum remains indecisive.
- Bitcoin ETF (IBIT) trend remains indecisive, and shorter-term momentum remains indecisive.
- Bond Price index ETF (AGG) trend remains bullish, and shorter-term momentum also remains bullish.
- US dollar ($USD) medium-term trend remains indecisive and the short-term momentum turned bearish again as price broke down below both the 20-day SMA and 200-day SMA.
- Gold Miners remains bullish, and shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- Gold trend remains bullish, and shorter-term momentum remains bullish.
- Silver trend remains bullish, and shorter-term momentum remains bullish.
- Copper ($COPPER) remains bullish, and shorter-term momentum turned bullish.
- Crude Oil ($WTIC) trend and shorter-term momentum both remain bearish.

Of the 11 major U.S. industry sectors, 9 are currently bullish for the medium term:

Technology, Communication Services, Consumer Discretionary, Industrials, Materials, Energy, Health Care, Financials, and Utilities.

Of the 11 major U.S. industry sectors, only 2 are indecisive for the medium term: Real Estate and Consumer Staples.

A strategy emphasizing both capital preservation and return on investment appears most rational and prudent at this time.

Every day we measure and weigh objective technical and quantitative data in order to judge the Reward/Risk probabilities of trend continuation or reversal. Definitions and Methodology

To streamline our presentation and reduce repetition, we provide the following definitions for clear communication. We strive to make our ratings as objective and unbiased as possible.

Major Long-Term Trends are the most important, so we weight them most heavily for our asset management strategy. Major trends can persist for years and produce price moves of 20% to 50% or more. The Major Long-Term Trend for the US stock market remains clearly bullish.

Systematic Trend Rating for the Medium-Term is rated bullish, bearish, or indecisive.

Medium-term trends typically last about 1 to 4 months and can produce significant price moves of 5% to 20%. We can systematically and objectively determine these trends by analyzing the relationships among just 3 variables: the most important is the 50-day SMA relative to (above or below) the 200-day SMA, less important is price relative to (above or below) the 200-day SMA, and least important is price relative to (above or below) the 50-day SMA. We systematically and objectively rate these relationships to determine the medium-term trend, as follows.

- Bullish: the 50-day SMA is above the 200-day SMA, the latest price is above its own trailing 200-day SMA, and the latest price is above its own trailing 50-day SMA.
- Bearish: the 50-day SMA is below the 200-day SMA, the latest price is below its own trailing 200-day SMA, and the latest price is below its own trailing 50-day SMA.
- Indecisive: the price and SMA relationships are mixed or unclear.

Short-Term Momentum can offer early warnings of change for larger trends. Short-term trends typically last up to 2 to 4 weeks and produce smaller price moves, often only a few percentage points and usually less than 10%. So, short-term momentum is much less significant than larger trends that last months or years and produce larger price moves. Short-term momentum can change suddenly and frequently, often producing unprofitable false signals, or whipsaws. Nevertheless, momentum sometimes gives useful early warnings of larger trend change. Our momentum analysis weighs trends of many indicators favored by professional traders and investors, including price, RSI, MACD, On-Balance Volume, spreads between price and multiple moving averages, market breadth, and divergences among these indicators. Price is the time-honored, most important technical indicator, so we weight trends and patterns of price more heavily for our momentum analysis. The S&P 500 price has crossed its 20-day SMA every 25 calendar days on average over the past 50 years, roughly matching momentum for short-term trend.

The table above shows our quantitative Relative Strength Rankings ("Rank", to the left) together with ratios of pure Price performance in the 3 different time frames that are most relevant to investors: medium term (CLOSE/50 SMA), longer term (CLOSE/200 SMA), and major trend (50/200, shown at the extreme right). SMA is an abbreviation for Simple Moving Average.

A security is in a bullish position (trending upward in Price) when all 3 time frames are in agreement in positive positions relative to their SMAs. Bullish trends are displayed in green.

A security is in a bearish position (trending downward in Price) when all 3 time frames are in agreement in negative positions relative to their SMAs. Bearish trends are displayed in red.

Sectors Ranked above 50 (as shown in the 1st column to the left) are demonstrating above-average Relative Strength, according to our completely objective quantitative algorithm. Those are the sectors most likely to outperform going forward. Sectors Ranked below 50 are demonstrating below-average Relative Strength and are most likely to underperform going forward.

The 3 columns on the right offer a perspective on sector strength measured over multiple time frames. They quantify each sectors' absolute Price strength relative to the most widely-accepted simple moving averages (SMAs), expressed as a percentage of a shorter time period Price divided by a longer time period's average Price. C/50 is the latest closing Price (C) divided by the 50-day SMA, and it indicates a medium-term view of the Price trend. C/200 is the latest closing Price (C) divided by the 200-day SMA and indicates a longer-term view. The major trend view is shown by the 50/200, which is the 50-day SMA divided by the 200-day SMA. These 3 ratios offer different views of the strength of each sector measured over 3 different time frames.

Investors seeking to maximize returns should concentrate in the higher-ranked, strongest sectors while avoiding the lower-ranked, underperforming sectors. Relative Strength has worked very well for many decades, outperforming nearly every other method of stock selection.

Top 10 ETFs, objectively ranked in order of long-term Relative Strength:

This list, updated each week, outperformed the S&P 500 since August, 2004, in simulation.

To arrive at our Top 10 ETFs selections, we first measure trend momentum of each ETF over a long time frame spanning many months, according to our objective formula. Next, we rank 143 of the most important ETFs, from highest to lowest. Finally, we select the ten highest-ranked, best-performing ETFs, the ones with the strongest major trend Price momentum.

Research studies suggest that ETFs ranked in the top decile may have a greater probability of outperforming the market in the months ahead, while low ranked ETFs may have a greater probability of underperforming.

For details on Relative Strength Ranking, please see Robert W. Colby's book, The Encyclopedia of Technical Market Indicators, Second Edition (2003), pages 604-609, or see our White Paper, "Introduction to the Screening Method for Analysis of Relative Strength", by Robert W. Colby, CMT, outlining some of the research behind our Relative Strength Ranking Method.

Please note that this is a high-volatility strategy: the stocks that go up the most when the stock market is in a Bullish trend often go down the most during market corrections to the downside. In addition, please note that this Top 10 list is a research study and is not investment advice. Defining Multiple Time Frames for Classifying Trends: It is important to understand that markets often display very different and conflicting trends, depending on the specific time period analyzed. Nearly a century ago, the Dow Theory established a useful way to organize time/trend information. In harmony with the Dow Theory, we organize our analysis into 4 different time frames, as follows:

1. Intraday fluctuations and day-to-day price jiggles are too small, too random, and change too frequently to be useful to anyone except elite professional traders or algorithms.
2. Short-term trends typically last up to 2--4 weeks, and prices typically move only a few points. These trends change frequently, often in reaction to the latest news and rumors, and so they are fickle and unreliable. The Dow Theory views these minor ripples as insignificant noise. Although skillful traders may be able to profit from short-term price movements, most investors cannot. The S&P 500 has crossed its 20-day SMA every 25 calendar days on average over the past 50 years, roughly matching this short-term trend.
3. Medium-term trends typically last about 1--4 months and can produce price moves of 5%--15%. These intermediate or secondary trends can move in the same direction as the major trend or can be consolidations or corrections against (opposite to) the direction of the major trend. The 50-day and 200-day SMAs can help to identify these trends. The S&P 500 index has crossed its 50-day SMA every 6 weeks on average over the past 50 years, and the index has crossed its 200-day SMA every 3--4 months on average over the past 50 years.
4. Major long-term trends are very big price moves that can last for years. Prices can move 20%--50%, or more. The major long-term trend is also known as the primary, dominant, and main trend. Major long-term trends are highly significant for all traders and investors. We always trade in the direction of the major trend, buying long in bull markets and selling long or selling short in bear markets, because that puts the probability of making money in our favor. Trading opposite to the major trend (that is, buying long in a bear market or selling short in a bull market) would put the odds against us and can lead to disastrous losses. All traders and investors can profit by trading in the same direction as the most important major trend. For the S&P 500, the 50-day SMA crossed the 200-day SMA every 23 months on average over the past 50 years, roughly matching this trend.

Relative Strength: academic studies and extensive experience show that probabilities favor buying the strongest trading instruments and avoiding weaker, underperforming ones. Although no market strategy is foolproof, buying and holding the strongest instruments has produced above-average returns in most years and is one of the most effective methods for selecting specific regions, countries, sectors, industries, stocks, bonds, or tangible assets for investment.

Investor Sentiment is mainly useful for short-term, counter-trend trading. Markets are complex adaptive systems that reflect the emotions of the crowd reacting to contradictory and incomplete information as well as changing decision rules. Prices tend to swing to emotional extremes of optimism and pessimism. When there is a great majority of bulls, few investors are left to buy, and rallies can suddenly fizzle and reverse. Conversely, when there is a majority of bears, few investors are left to sell, and short-squeeze rallies suddenly can appear seemingly out of nowhere. Moderate sentiment tends to coincide with uncertain, indecisive markets. Note that sentiment extremes are often early, and momentum can sustain a trend in motion beyond sentiment extremes. The Art of Contrary Opinion is not a science; it is an art lacking consistent rules.

Robert W. Colby Asset Management, Inc. (Colby) hereby certifies that the views expressed in this research report accurately reflect the personal views of the Company's Chief Investment Officer, Robert W. Colby, CMT, and/or other trained members of Colby, about any and all of the subject markets or securities, and further certifies that no part of the compensation of Colby was, is, or will be directly or indirectly related to the recommendations or views in this report. Colby is engaged in investment management as well as the conduct and publication of professional-quality, independent technical analysis research and, as a matter of policy, always makes best efforts to be as objective and unbiased as possible.

Any and all statements referring to Robert W. Colby Asset Management, Inc., performance are intended to be accurate and complete and to disclose all material facts necessary to avoid any unwarranted inference. Any and all investment performance data shown reflect all accounts in our recommended investment program. (Some clients, at their own choosing, may hold securities that are not included in our recommended investment program, or they may choose to deviate from our program in some other way; therefore, their performance results may deviate from our recommended investment program, for better or worse, and are not included in our performance data.) Our performance data reflects the deduction of advisory fees, brokerage or other commissions and fees, and any other expenses that accounts have actually paid. Our performance data reflects the reinvestment of dividends, interest, and other earnings. Our investment strategies and all fees are explained on our website and in our disclosure documents and also are available on request.

The industry standard benchmark for performance comparison is generally the S&P 500 Index, although that and all other Price indexes have certain limitations in that they differ from our recommended investment program in volatility, asset mix, diversification/concentration, dividends, interest, trading costs, fees, and other factors. Unlike the S&P 500 Index, which passively reflects the Price performance of 500 large-capitalization stocks, our recommended investment program is concentrated in relatively few securities and actively aims first for capital preservation and second for capital appreciation. We work continuously to achieve these goals. We try to anticipate and adapt to change. Regulators point out that there can never be any guarantees in investing; there is always risk and the possibility of loss; changing market conditions are beyond anyone's control; and past performance is not a guide to future performance.

Colby's technical analysis is prepared using widely-available public data that is generally accepted as reasonably reliable, although Colby cannot guarantee accuracy or completeness of data and analysis and no representation is made to that effect. Colby's technical analysis is based primarily on analysis of the current Price and volume performance of a security relative to other securities and in the context of its historical patterns of performance, in accordance with the Body of Knowledge and Code of Ethics endorsed by the CMT Association, the globally-recognized, professional regulatory organization for technical analysts established in 1973.
