War Fear intensifies, but Extreme Fear is bullish according to The Art of Contrary Opinion.

- War fears have caused heightened volatility and increasing short-term price weakness for global markets over the past three weeks. Stock indexes are clearly trending down but could reverse to the upside suddenly if the war ends.
- Long-term momentum is still bullish.
- Downside momentum has increased over three time frames.
- Of our 38 major markets, only a 13% minority are now above their own 50-day Simple Moving Averages (SMAs), indicating a worsening downside price correction for the short term.
- From a somewhat longer-term perspective, a 55% majority now are above their own 200-day SMAs—but that is down from 82% just two weeks ago.
- Regarding the long-term major trend, an 84% majority remain bullish (with the 50-day SMAs above 200-day SMAs), down from 92% two weeks ago.
- Price/SMA ratios for all stocks in the S&P 500 index show a similar picture: only 21.0% are above their trailing 50-day SMAs, and 45.2% are above their trailing 200-day SMAs.
- A-D Line reflects the worsening short-term price pullback. The Cumulative Daily Advance-Decline fell for the third consecutive week to an 11-week low, declining further below its 50-day SMA. Longer term, the A-D Line remains above its 200-day SMA, and the 50/200 SMAs ratio remains bullish.

- Net New Highs indicate relatively moderate damage. Currently at -162, the lowest since last April when it hit -1161, the Highs-minus-Lows reading is moderately bearish below the zero dividing line.
- Relative strength rotation has shifted following war news. The previously-strong, equal-weight RSP underperformed large-cap SPY and QQQ since the war started on 2/28/2026. Meanwhile, the QQQ and Technology ETF (XLK) both outperformed SPY. The popular view that AI enthusiasm has been overdone has contributed to cheaper valuations for technology stocks—a sector that remains critical in a wartime environment.
- Energy stands out as the only strong sector amid all the weakness. The S&P 500 Energy Sector SPDR (XLE, 59.31) jumped to a new all-time price high last week as Crude Oil WTI May '26 (CLk26, 98.23) rose to its highest closing price since May 2022. Oil and oil stocks have dominated markets since the conflict began three weeks ago.
- Fearful sentiment is bullish. $VIX spiked to 29.28 on Friday, 3/20/2026, remaining below the previous peak of 35.3 on 3/09/2026. AAI Bulls/Bears reflected increasing pessimism at 30%/52%, compared to 32%/46% last week. The Put/Call Ratio jumped to 2 standard deviations above its 20-day average. CNN Investor Sentiment fell from a peak of 66 on 1/28/2026 to 15 on Friday, placing it deep within the Extreme Fear zone—a bullish signal according to The Art of Contrary Opinion.
- International equities underperformed over the past three weeks. EEM fell further below its 50-day SMA and 100-day SMA but remains above its still rising 200-day SMA. EFA broke down below its 200-day SMA and has underperformed EEM for more than two years. Short-term trends both are pointing lower.
- China stocks ETF index (FXI) broke down to its lowest price level since 6/2/2025. FXI signaled a “death cross” on 3/11/2026, occurring when the 50-day SMA crosses below the 200-day SMA. Continue to avoid FXI.
- US Dollar eased lower after RSI hit overbought at 77 on 3/13/2026. The US Dollar ETF (UUP, 27.68) remains above all major SMAs, though some volatility is to be expected in this wartime environment.
- Metals declined despite worsening war news and may be vulnerable to further downside. Gold Miners (GDX), Silver (SLV), Copper (CPER), and Gold (GLD) fell below their 50-day and 100-day SMAs. Given the war news, this is not bullish price action, and the poor performance suggests a need for downside protection.
- Oil remains bullish. The Crude Oil WTI May '26 futures contract (CLk26, 98.23) rose to its highest closing price since May 2022, while the Oil ETF (USO) reached its highest price since October 2018. Prices are in strong uptrends, though they could reverse quickly if the war ends.
- US fixed-income bond and note prices fell steeply as oil rose. Investors fear that rising energy costs will drive inflation and interest rates higher. The long US bond ETF (TLT), US Note ETF (IEF), US Aggregate bond (AGG), High-Yield Corporate (HYG), and TIPS (TIP) all broke down below their 50-day SMAs and 200-day SMAs. Prices are in downtrends for the short term—but the future path may depend on war news.

Ranking Methodology: Our rankings use the most important Simple Moving Averages (SMA) to objectively quantify Relative Strength, which we sort from strongest to weakest. Academic studies and extensive experience show that probabilities favor buying the strongest trading instruments and avoiding weaker, underperforming ones. Although no market strategy is foolproof, buying and holding the strongest instruments has produced above-average returns in most years and is one of the most effective methods for selecting specific regions, countries, sectors, industries, stocks, bonds, or tangible assets for investment.

A strategy emphasizing both capital preservation and return on investment appears most rational and prudent at this time.

Every day we measure and weigh objective technical and quantitative data in order to judge the Reward/Risk probabilities of trend continuation or reversal. Our goal is to protect your assets from major risks while capitalizing on an improving investment outlook for the medium- and long-term. We always put our clients' best interests first.

Consider exploring our professional fiduciary asset management services to protect and grow your wealth. We are happy to discuss your goals and concerns and answer your questions. For a free consultation, contact Bill Anderson, by phone (646) 652-6879, or by email:

The table above shows our quantitative Relative Strength Rankings, ranked from Strongest=99 to Weakest=1, in multiple time frames. The 50/200 column is the most important, indicating the percentage difference of the 50 SMA divided by the 200 SMA, an indication of the dominant trend. Next in importance is the C/200, indicating the percentage difference of the latest price Close divided by the 200 SMA, an indication of the medium-term trend. The C/50 indicates the percentage difference of the latest price Close divided by the 50 SMA, reflecting a somewhat shorter and more sensitive medium-term trend. Finally, the C/20 indicates the percentage difference of the latest price Close divided by the 20 SMA, an indication of the short-term trend. SMA is an abbreviation for Simple Moving Average. Bullish trends are displayed in green, while Bearish trends are displayed in red.

Sectors Ranked above 50 (as shown in the Rank column, the first one to the left) are demonstrating above-average major-trend Relative Strength, according to our completely objective quantitative algorithm. Those are the sectors most likely to outperform going forward. Sectors Ranked below 50 are demonstrating below-average Relative Strength and are most likely to underperform going forward.

The data in columns offer perspectives on sector strength measured in multiple time frames. They quantify each sector's absolute Price strength relative to the most widely-accepted simple moving averages (SMAs), expressed as a percentage of a shorter time period Price divided by a longer time period's average Price.

Investors seeking to maximize returns should concentrate in the higher-ranked, strongest sectors while avoiding the lower-ranked, underperforming sectors. Relative Strength has worked very well for many decades, outperforming nearly every other method of stock selection.

Top 10 ETFs, objectively ranked in order of long-term Relative Strength:

To arrive at our Top 10 ETFs selections, we first measure trend momentum of each ETF over a long time frame, 50-and 200-trading days. Next, we rank 143 of the most important ETFs, from highest to lowest. Finally, we select the ten highest-ranked, best-performing ETFs, the ones with the strongest major-trend Price momentum.

Research studies suggest that ETFs ranked in the top decile (90 to 100) may have a greater probability of outperforming the market in the months ahead, while low ranked ETFs (0 to 10) may have a greater probability of underperforming.

For details on Relative Strength Ranking, please see Robert W. Colby's book, The Encyclopedia of Technical Market Indicators, Second Edition (2003), pages 604-609, or see our White Paper, "Introduction to the Screening Method for Analysis of Relative Strength", by Robert W. Colby, CMT, outlining some of the research behind our Relative Strength Ranking Method.

Please note that this is a high-volatility strategy: the stocks that go up the most when the stock market is in a Bullish trend often go down the most during market corrections to the downside. In addition, please note that this Top 10 list is a research study and is not investment advice. 143 Select Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs), objectively ranked in order of long-term Relative Strength:

This list is filtered to exclude leveraged and inactive ETFs trading less than 90,000 shares a day on average. Ranks are based on our updated version of the Screening Method for Analysis of Relative Strength, described above, which measures trend momentum over a long time frame, 50-and 200-trading days. For details on Relative Strength Ranking, please see Robert W. Colby's book, The Encyclopedia of Technical Market Indicators, Second Edition (2003), pages 604-609, or see our White Paper, "Introduction to the Screening Method for Analysis of Relative Strength", by Robert W. Defining Multiple Time Frames for Classifying Trends: It is important to understand that markets often display very different and conflicting trends, depending on the specific time period analyzed. Nearly a century ago, the Dow Theory established a useful way to organize time/trend information. In harmony with the Dow Theory, we organize our analysis into 4 different time frames, as follows:

1. Intraday fluctuations and day-to-day price jiggles are too small, too random, and change too frequently to be useful to anyone except elite professional traders or algorithms.
2. Short-term trends typically last about 2--4 weeks, and prices typically move only a few points. These trends change frequently, often in reaction to the latest news and rumors, and so they are fickle and unreliable. The Dow Theory views these minor ripples as insignificant noise. Although skillful traders may be able to profit from short-term price movements, most investors cannot. The S&P 500 has crossed its 20-day Simple Moving Average (SMA) every 25 calendar days on average over the past 50 years, roughly matching this short-term trend.
3. Medium-term trends typically last about 1--4 months and can produce price moves of 5%--15%. These intermediate or secondary trends can move in the same direction as the major trend or can be consolidations or corrections against (opposite to) the direction of the major trend. The 50-day and 200-day SMAs can help to identify these trends. The S&P 500 index has crossed its 50-day SMA every 6 weeks on average over the past 50 years, and the index has crossed its 200-day SMA every 3--4 months on average over the past 50 years.
4. Major long-term trends produce very big price moves that can last for years. Prices can move 20%--50%, or more. The major long-term trend is also known as the primary, dominant, and main trend. Major long-term trends are highly significant for all traders and investors. We always trade in the direction of the major trend, buying long in bull markets and selling long or selling short in bear markets, because that puts the probability of making money in our favor. Trading opposite to the major trend (that is, buying long in a bear market or selling short in a bull market) would put the odds against us and can lead to disastrous losses. All traders and investors can profit by trading in the same direction as the most important major trend. For the S&P 500, the 50-day SMA crossed the 200-day SMA every 23 months on average over the past 50 years, roughly matching this trend.

Relative Strength: academic studies and extensive experience show that probabilities favor buying the strongest trading instruments and avoiding weaker, underperforming ones. Although no market strategy is foolproof, buying and holding the strongest instruments has produced above-average returns in most years and is one of the most effective methods for selecting specific regions, countries, sectors, industries, stocks, bonds, or tangible assets for investment.

Investor Sentiment is mainly useful for short-term, counter-trend trading. Markets are complex adaptive systems that reflect the emotions of the crowd reacting to contradictory and incomplete information as well as changing decision rules. Prices tend to swing to emotional extremes of optimism and pessimism. When there is a great majority of bulls, few investors are left to buy, and rallies can suddenly fizzle and reverse. Conversely, when there is a majority of bears, few investors are left to sell, and short-squeeze rallies suddenly can appear seemingly out of nowhere. Moderate sentiment tends to coincide with uncertain, indecisive markets. Note that sentiment extremes are often early, and momentum can sustain a trend in motion beyond sentiment extremes. The Art of Contrary Opinion is not a science; it is an art lacking consistent rules.

Robert W. Colby Asset Management, Inc. (Colby) hereby certifies that the views expressed in this research report accurately reflect the personal views of the Company's Chief Investment Officer, Robert W. Colby, CMT, and/or other trained members of Colby, about any and all of the subject markets or securities, and further certifies that no part of the compensation of Colby was, is, or will be directly or indirectly related to the recommendations or views in this report. Colby is engaged in investment management as well as the conduct and publication of professional-quality, independent technical analysis research and, as a matter of policy, always makes best efforts to be as objective and unbiased as possible.

Any and all statements referring to Robert W. Colby Asset Management, Inc., performance are intended to be accurate and complete and to disclose all material facts necessary to avoid any unwarranted inference. Any and all investment performance data shown reflect all accounts in our recommended investment program. (Some clients, at their own choosing, may hold securities that are not included in our recommended investment program, or they may choose to deviate from our program in some other way; therefore, their performance results may deviate from our recommended investment program, for better or worse, and are not included in our performance data.) Our performance data reflects the deduction of advisory fees, brokerage or other commissions and fees, and any other expenses that accounts have actually paid. Our performance data reflects the reinvestment of dividends, interest, and other earnings. Our investment strategies and all fees are explained on our website and in our disclosure documents and also are available on request.

The industry standard benchmark for performance comparison is generally the S&P 500 Index, although that and all other Price indexes have certain limitations in that they differ from our recommended investment program in volatility, asset mix, diversification/concentration, dividends, interest, trading costs, fees, and other factors. Unlike the S&P 500 Index, which passively reflects the Price performance of 500 large-capitalization stocks, our recommended investment program is concentrated in relatively few securities, and actively aims first for capital preservation and second for capital appreciation. We work continuously to achieve these goals. We try to anticipate and adapt to change. Regulators point out that there can never be any guarantees in investing; there is always risk and the possibility of loss; changing market conditions are beyond anyone's control; and past performance is not a guide to future performance.

Colby's technical analysis is prepared using widely-available public data that is generally accepted as reasonably reliable, although Colby cannot guarantee accuracy or completeness of data and analysis and no representation is made to that effect. Colby's technical analysis is based primarily on analysis of the current Price and volume performance of a security relative to other securities and in the context of its historical patterns of performance, in accordance with the Body of Knowledge and Code of Ethics endorsed by the CMT Association, the globally-recognized, professional regulatory organization for technical analysts established in 1973.
